New York.

Dear Sir,

In reply to your kind favour of the 24th ult., I have the pleasure of accepting your kind offer of translating my book without charge to me, and arranging for its American publication; the profits of the American edition to be shared by us on a fifty-fifty basis.

Under separate cover, I am sending you another copy of my FINIS BRITANNIA for translation.

I will most naturally be very anxious to learn who you have secured for the translating work, and, in fact, everything in connection with your progress in this matter from time to time.

I would also ask you to be very careful about the translation and to please send me a few copies of the book when published.

Thanking you for the interest you have taken in my work, and hoping that this initial undertaking will lead to further relations mutually both beneficial and agreeable,

I remain,

Yours very truly.

P.S.- I will send you in due time a few documents for publicity.
